

What You've Been Waiting For! (Well, some of you have!)

With the marking of properties with single (light blue) and double (dark blue) stakes identifying meter locations, several of you have been contacting the Office with questions... or corrections. When you see one of these stakes near your current water connection, please verify that the stake is in the correct location. We have found some interesting situations. Since no one paid for consumption of water in the past, water connections were used pretty casually. With system replacement, you want to be paying for your water consumption, not your neighbor's.

I asked Jester Purttleman to put together an explanation as to what will happen when the service meter setter goes in. Please click here and read thoroughly. If there's no blue stake yet, don't panic, the resident inspectors are setting these, with help from Judy Greinke. If the stake is in the wrong location, let us know right away, preferably by email so that we have the written record and can easily share it with each other and the contractor. And don't pull them up.

Once again, thank you for your patience. Try to keep those big trucks from driving over the valves in the road. We had another incident yesterday which caused a leak and a flooding of a drain field. There are HMC costs attached to these repairs.
